Conservation Stewardship Program

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is opening the Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP) for new enrollments for federal fiscal year 2014. Now through January 17, 2014, producers interested in participating in the program can submit applications to NRCS.

The CSP is an important Farm Bill conservation program that helps established conservation stewards take their current level of natural resource management to the next level to improve both their agricultural production and provide valuable conservation benefits such as cleaner and more abundant water, as well as healthier soils and better wildlife habitat.

"CSP encourages landowners who are already implementing conservation on their land to take a comprehensive look at their resource concerns and adopt new conservation activities that can go even further to conserve natural resources and increase the productivity of their operations," said Jack Kuhn, acting state conservationist for the NRCS in Kentucky.

Kuhn said today's announcement is another example of USDA's comprehensive focus on promoting environmental conservation and strengthening the rural economy, and it is a reminder that a new Food, Farm and Jobs Bill is pivotal to continue these efforts. CSP is now in its fifth year and so far, NRCS has partnered with producers to enroll more than 59 million acres across the nation.
