

Homeschool students put gloves on to put compost made by vermiculture (worms) on the raised flower bed. The compost was topped by soil and flowers were planted.

One of the young students uses a cup to water the flowers after they were set out by the homeschool students. For more information about the library program for homeschool students, please call the children's librarian, Whitney Hayes.

Boys carried the bags of soil and put in the raised bed. They didn't seem to mind the soil was heavy.

A home-schooled student held the plant ever so gently before putting it into the soil.

The last thing needed was to drop crushed egg shells, which are good for flowers.

Block Party on Broadway

Christian Worship Center had food and gifts Sunday afternoon. They also baptized anyone who felt the need. Top photo: A young girl was one of about a dozen who were baptized. The group photo is of children who attend the church's youth group and wanted to be baptized.
